

We'll make a great team
working together

Everyday I get up and think to myself, "I love my job!" I get to work with a variety of interesting people, helping them in ways that touch their lives everyday.

Most people buy or sell a home only a few times in their lives, so it never really becomes a familiar experience. My goal is to not only make the process easy for you, but to help you enjoy it as well. So relax, take a deep breath, and repeat after me, "This is going to be fun!"

In the nearly thirty years that I've been a residential and commercial Realtor, I've seen and done it all before. There isn't anything that can take me by surprise. And that experience makes it easy for me to make selling or buying less complicated for you.

Maybe it's time for a chat

A life of joy

shared with family and friends

If you're anything like me, your home is your sanctuary to your busy life. Maybe your children are grown, and now you're spending your time the way you've always dreamed.
—My husband, David and I certainly are.

Thirty years ago when we married, we created a wonderful, blended family. Our kids now have families of their own, and we fill our free time doing the things we love—gardening, traveling, sailing, snorkeling, reading and lots and lots of entertaining.

I surround myself with people I love, and you can count on- it usually happening right in the kitchen. They say too many cooks spoil the broth, but when we cook we all get in on the act. I love to whip up a favorite ethnic dish like African Chicken Peanut Soup or try to replicate something new that we've tasted on our travels.

Cats Katie and Henny remind us to respect other's pets when showing a home • Cooking is a family affair, thanks to co-chefs, Cindy, Tina, Isabel, Matt and Dave • Mt. Ranier and the text text about the Pacific Northwest that I love so dearly.

I'll open your mind to the possibilities

I know the Northwest like the back of my hand. As a third generation Oregonian, and having spent most of my adult life in Washington and Oregon, I've been blessed to live in some of the area's most beautiful communities.

If there's a specific community that you've been eyeing to live in, I'll ferret out any potential sellers. In fact, this is where my commercial real estate background gives me an edge over other residential agents. I'm absolutely fearless when it comes to scoping out just the right property, and maybe my Scottish heritage is to blame for such dogged persistence. People call me the woman of a thousand questions, because I won't leave a stone unturned. Hire me and you will get the results you want.

If you were to ask me what I love best about being a Realtor, I'd have to say it's helping people imagine and achieving the possibilities. And that's because I don't want you to miss a great opportunity, so I'm going to help you think outside the box, to open your mind to options you might not have imagined.
